

Matada

Seeds of Terror

E.R. Zietlow

Based on a terrorist bombing in Central America during the 1980s, the novel Matada explores the greed and materialism that have fanned flames of hatred toward the United States. Ultimately a love story, E.R. Zietlow's timely adaption of historical events discloses the Myth of the Feminine Healer and shows us that humanity's self-destructive ways make deep inner transformation imperative.

PUBLICITY

- Publicist working with this title
- Author will tour

THE AUTHOR

E. R. Zietlow grew up in South Dakota. After taking degrees from Dakota Wesleyan University, Boston University and the University of Washington, he held a position in the English Department at the University of Victoria.

PREVIOUS PUBLICATIONS

These Same Hills (Knopf)
The Indian Maiden's Captivity
The Heart of the Country

FICTION / TERRORISM / PSYCHOLOGY

Trade Paperback / 5.5" x 8.5" / 224 pages

Granville Island Publishing

ISBN 1-894694-11-2 / $14.95 US / $19.95 CDN

“

*One of the best books
of the year.*

”

New York Times

review of These Same Hills